Negro Who Stabbed Piazza Gets 25 Years at Parchman

Gerald Lewis, 32-year-old Negro, today was sentenced to 25 years in the State Penitentiary at Parchman by Judge Leslie Grant Lewis was the subject last June 4 of a dramatic 30-minute manhunt here following the slaying of Tony Piazza with a letter opener and the looting of several homes.

Lewis stabbed Piazza with a letter opener when Piazza attempted to trap the colored man in a clothes closet in the Piazza home where Lewis had fled while attempting to elude pursuers. The negro earlier had looted the office of Dr. Jesse Sewell on Carroll Ave. and the house of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Smith.

Lewis took $60 from the bedroom of the Piazza home, but overlooked $150 in the pocket of a pair of trousers.

Piazza, a local barber, was not seriously wounded.

According to District Attorney Boyce Hulleman Lewis was given 25 years for the armed robbery of Piazza, and 5 years for burglary in the Smith home, the sentences to run concurrently.

As this is Lewis' third conviction for robbery, any chance for parole is automatically eliminated, the District Attorney said.

Lewis previously had served a term in the Texas State Penitentiary.

Waveland Planning to Fight Train Service Discontinuance

DARLING NORMAND WINS FORESTRY QUEEN TITLE

Darling Normand, senior at Bay High School, was selected Hancock County Forestry Queen at a contest held at 1:30 yesterday afternoon in the Youth Center at Kiln.

A check for $40 and a bouquet of roses were presented by Marion T. Parker, Area Forest Ranger for Hancock County.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James O. Normand.

Miss Normand will represent Hancock County in the District Contest along with contestants from sixteen other counties for the district winner. This will be held October 7 at the Pearl River Livestock Show in Picayune.

The winner in that event will go to the State Contest, which will be held in Jackson during the State Fair.

Runner-up for second place was Miss Janet Brelaud of Waveland and a student at Bay High School. She received a $20 check for second place.

Three other contestants, Gaydell Cue, Senior at SJA, and Betty Hartsfield and Ruth Bennett, both of Bay High, were awarded checks for $7.50 each.

Money for prizes was donated by business and professional leaders of Hancock County.

FOUR HURT AS CAR OVERTURNS FRIDAY NIGHT

Four Bay St. Louis residents were injured Friday night when the car in which they were riding turned over four times on the Highway at Pass Christian.

The accident occurred at approximately 9:30 at that area of the Pass where the red light is situated on the town highway.

Miss Mary Margaret Johnston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Johnston, was driving the car, a 1953 Chevrolet, owned by George Curet, who was an occupant. Other occupants were Misses Mattie and Irma Mae Riggs, sisters, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Riggs.

Miss Johnston told the EAGLE that she was driving along the highway when an automobile entered the main highway from an intersecting road. She pulled her car over, thinking the driver of the oncoming car would wait for them to pass, however when he continued his entry to the main highway, she swerved her car and pulled to the right of the road, the other car proceeded to pull in front of her to the right so she pulled to the left of the road, giving passing signals of light blinking and blowing of the horn. The driver of the other car refused to respond to any signals. The car driven by Miss Johnston swerved and hit the curb and turned over four times. Curet was pinned under the car. Miss Johnston and Miss Irma Mae Riggs were thrown from the car, and Miss Mattie Riggs was pinned in the automobile.

The driver of the other car continued traveling. No identification of the car was made. Several motorists passed the scene of the accident continuing their travel. A patrol car with flashing lights arrived at the scene and notified ambulance service called by one of the victims who was unconscious and insisted upon being brought to Bay St. Louis.

Fahey and Reiman ambulance service brought them to Kings Daughters hospital.

Miss Johnston received multiple lacerations of the head, face and arms, also a cut on the back and body bruises. George Curet suffered a broken left leg and multiple bruises. Miss Mattie Riggs received a slight spine chip, and Miss Irma Mae Riggs received a fractured knee cap on the right leg, a deeply gashed left ankle, and multiple body bruises.

Curet and Miss Mattie Riggs were discharged from the hospital Monday. Miss Johnston and Miss Irma Mae Riggs are still hospitalized.

A petition has been filed by the L. & N. Railroad with the Mississippi Public Service Commission to discontinue passenger train service stops at Waveland, Long Beach and Gautier on the Gulf Coast.

Both commuter and through train service at these points would be affected by the request.

Mayor Garfield Ladner and the Board of Aldermen of Waveland have secured the services of Weaver Gore, Jackson attorney, to represent Waveland in an attempt to prevent the stopping of these passenger trains.

Mayor Ladner told the EAGLE that such action on the part of the railroad would drastically effect the town of Waveland, and the recent progress of the town would be greatly retarded if such action were permitted by the PSC.

A meeting is scheduled for October, on a date to be designated by the PSC, in Waveland for the purpose of presenting both sides of the issue. Chairman Alton Massey of the PSC will be present. The American Legion will be represented by the District leader, and Mayor Ladner urges all Waveland citizens to present, as pressure from individual citizens will to a great extent influence the outcome of the hearing.

Death Of N. Bourgeois Being Investigated

Funeral services were held here last week for Nicholas Bourgeois of Julia St., but mystery surrounded the events which led to his death, according to members of the family.

The remains were shipped here from Miami, where he died in jail, broken a body, bleeding internally.

According to an account in a Miami paper, Nicholas Bourgeois was taken to Jackson Memorial hospital in Miami Monday night, Sept. 13. He was reported in a semi-conscious condition and was clad only in his shorts.

Dr. Walter Omansky, the report stated, treated the former Air Force man for drunkenness. The police were called to take him to jail.

"Bourgeois was taken back to the jail," the Miami Account said, "and placed in a cell. Inmates of an adjoining cell said they saw him get up, attempt to walk, then collapse across the commode. At 7 a.m. jailer Frank Lindley found him dead."

A later autopsy, the story said, revealed that Bourgeois had nine broken ribs and had died from internal bleeding. It was thought he had perhaps been struck by an automobile.

A detective was assigned to the case but the Bourgeois family has thus far received no word on the matter.

No x-rays were taken at first, the Miami statement said, because Bourgeois had not complained of pain and his blood pressure and respiration were normal except for signs of intoxication.

Windstorm Friday Morning Wreaks Havoc In Bay St. Louis

A freak windstorm did considerable damage Friday morning about two o'clock. Television antennas on several homes were bent in half, a metal vent on top of Bay High School was lifted and placed in the middle of Union Ave., and the garage of the home owned by Mayor John Scafide on Carroll Ave. and occupied by the Frank Kiefer family was picked up, crumpled, and tossed back down on top of the car parked in it.

The garage was a total loss, and considerable damage was done to the automobile, a 5-month-old 1954 Ford.

A flash that lighted the sky at the time the velocity of the wind was at its greatest was caused by a Mississippi Power Co. transformer that had been struck by lightning.

COUNTY AGENT'S NOTES

BY HOWARD F. SIMMONS
Hancock County Agent

POULTRY

Better make arrangements now to close up part of the poultry house when cold weather arrives. In bad weather air passage through the poultry house is called "cross ventilation" and is desired.

However, in cold weather such air movements are called drafts. These drafts are dangerous.

Drafts encourage colds and colds mean a heavy loss in egg production.

So don't have air coming into your poultry house from more than one side during the fall and winter.

Houses with windows and under window ventilators should be closed up tight on three sides. Pole type houses open all the way from floor to roof should be wrapped tight on three sides.

Most of such houses have roof type ventilators. Any openings in the lower half of the wall may result in up drafts of air out through the roof top ventilator.

In really cold weather, all sides of the house should be closed up. In this case, the roof top ventilator will furnish plenty of ventilation.

Anguinous mites and rice weevils damage sorghum seed in storage. Reduce this damage by treating the seed before when you spread them to dry.

Materials to use include DDT and commercially prepared grain protectant DDT. Use one per cent five per cent or 10 per cent DDT dust. You can use 50 per cent DDT wettable powder if you mix it time to time with flour.

Use an ounce and a half of DDT dust (six level tablespoons) to one cubic foot of seed heads. Example: seed heads spread 10 feet by 10 feet by one-half foot deep equals 50 cubic feet.

GRAIN PROTECTANT (0.8 per cent piperonyl and 0.05 per cent pyrethrin). Not quite as effective as DDT, it is commercially prepared and ready to use. Do not use protectant dusts in which all ethirins have been substituted for a part of the pyrethrin.

Use three ounces (12 level tablespoons) for each cubic foot of seed heads.

HOW TO APPLY: Sift dust onto seed heads using flour sack, sheeting or coarse sack. Hand dust guns may be used.

used. Stir seed heads several times with a pitchfork to help insecticide get to seed heads below.

CAUTION: Do not feed treated seed to poultry or livestock.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

OCTOBER 3-9, 1954

National fire prevention week, Oct. 3-9, is a good time for you to take stock of the fire hazards around your farm and home. At the same time you can check on your fire fighting equipment.

Here is what you need in the way of equipment to fight fire.

Have an adequate supply of water available at any season of the year.

Place approved fire extinguishers at the barn, machine sheds and storage places for gasoline and kerosene.

Have garden hoses or filled water barrels and buckets located in spots where you can get them in use in a hurry.

Safe ladders long enough to use for every purpose and to reach the highest inflammable roof top are recommended.

A back-pack pump, fire sweater, wet brooms or wet burlap bags for fighting grass fires are a big help.

Makes sure that your electric wiring is equipped with lightning arresters to ground any lightning that might come in over electric supply lines.

Use fire-resistant roofing material; overhaul and fix up all heating equipment; cultivate careful smoking habits.

Never store gasoline or other flammable liquids in your home. Never use kerosene to start fires. Do not store saw hay in barns. Replace worn or frayed wiring. Replace or repair defective electrical appliances. Use proper fuses for your electrical circuits.

Time and the elements have taken their toll but many today are as sound as the reasons which prompted their building. Possibly the oldest building of any denomination, however, is the Baptist Church of Woodville, whose congregation met secretly in the Bethel community as early as 1805.

Meetings were sub rosa because Roman Catholicism was the state religion of the Spaniards, titular sovereigns of the country at the time. But from that small congregation of faithful independents grew the Baptist State Convention.

For nearly a century after La Salle arrived, Catholicism was the religion under France. After the Seven Years War in 1763, France lost her possessions to Britain and the new settlers who followed believed emphatically in the separation of Church and State.

With the same determination that left their mark on the state's agriculture, the people of the east, from the eastern states, who were of Tory caste, drove the wedge of Protestantism into the almost solidly Catholic society.

By 1779, however, British rule gave way to Spanish dominion, and once again Catholicism became the official religion of the territory. Lenient civil laws, however, attracted more and more Anglo-Saxon Protestants who found a religion cause in opposition to Spain's rigid religious laws.

Under militant preachers in secret meetings Mississippi once more made the transition from Catholicism to Protestantism. Out of this came the first Baptist Church which not only superseded the authority of the Catholic Church, but which laid the framework for the introduction of other sects.

The first Methodist Church followed at Washington in 1799; the first Presbyterian Church was organized in Jefferson County in 1804, and so on down the line, with Episcopal, Christian, Lutheran and Jewish churches following.

Members of the Catholic faith were almost destitute of spiritual attention until 1837 when Pope Gregory XVI established a new diocese to embrace Mississippi, making Natchez its cathedral city. Priests were sent to administer to the Irish Catholics at Paulding, Bassfield, and to families along the Coast. The work among negroes on the Coast was outstanding and the church set up at Bay St. Louis the first seminary in America to train Negro boys for the priesthood.

A great migration followed the admission of Mississippi into the Union and with religious doctrines were transplanted from one section of the country to another.

The Episcopal church flourished first along the Mississippi River among wealthy planters and slave

HISTORIC CHURCHES TELL PART RELIGION HAS PLAYED IN STATE

Evidence of Mississippi's religious life for the more than two-and-a-half centuries since the first Catholic mass was said at Fort Adams near Woodville in 1682 can be traced today not only in the history books but through scores of still existent church buildings which date as far back as the early 1800's.

Religion has played an important part in the colorful history of the state and its people since Robert Cavalier de la Salle sailed down the Mississippi River and took possession of Louisiana in the name of King Louis XIV of France. Much of the history of religion in Mississippi since that eventful year of 1682 can be found today in the numerous historic churches which are located in almost every section of the state.

Many of these sacred edifices reflect not only the architecture of the era in which they were built but give an insight into the customs and the way of life of their congregations down through the years.

Their histories combine both legend and fact into an interesting, enlightening and enlightening series of anecdotes which can be more thoroughly appreciated by the reader who visits them.

The work among negroes on the Coast was outstanding and the church set up at Bay St. Louis the first seminary in America to train Negro boys for the priesthood.

A great migration followed the admission of Mississippi into the Union and with religious doctrines were transplanted from one section of the country to another.

The Episcopal church flourished first along the Mississippi River among wealthy planters and slave owners, later moving northward into the upper Delta.

The Methodist Church of Woodville, built in 1821, is probably the oldest of its denomination in Mississippi. Methodistism rapidly spread throughout the state after this church was built.

After organizing their first church, the Presbyterians were reinforced by families from the Carolinas and they grew so fast that the Mississippi Presbytery was formed in 1815.

Baptists had a particularly strong appeal among the independent farmers who settled in the Pine Woods of Southern Mississippi and here they gained a foothold.

Methodists, close on the heels of Baptists in numbers, rapidly spread their churches throughout the state. Next came the Christian church, established near Jackson first in 1838. The last to organize a church in Mississippi, anti-bellum period were the Lutherans who came from South Carolina to Sallis in 1840, establishing the New Hope Congregation Church in 1846.

Following the Civil War, urban population grew and with the rise of towns came a large influx of Jewish people. The state's first synagogue was founded at Woodville in 1866.

War Marks

Many of Mississippi's historic old churches bear the mark of war. The Presbyterian Church at Rodney, now a ghost town on the Mississippi River between Vicksburg and Natchez, was shelled by Federal gunboats and bears the marks of cannon balls. Because of changes in the river's course, this once important port is now three miles inland.

Old Bethel Presbyterian Church south of Port Gibson, built in 1820, was riddled by bullets poured into its belfry by irreverent soldiers of General Grant's army en route to Vicksburg.

A church of the same faith at Holly Springs was in the process of being dedicated when Federal troops arrived in 1863, using the lower floor for a stable.

Another Presbyterian church used as a hospital for Confederate wounded during the war is located at Enterprise.

One of the oldest Episcopal churches west of the Alleghenies is St. Paul's at Woodville, erected in 1824. Little changed by time, this beautiful old church contains massive chandeliers from an old monastery, an original carved altar and an imported English organ which is still in use.

In 1862 the congregation forwarded the church bell to General Beauregard to be melted into cannon, "hoping that its gentle tones that have so often called us to the House of God, may be transcribed into war's resounding rhyme to repel the ruthless invader from the beautiful and God, in his goodness, has given us."

Another church with a significant bell is St. Mary's Cathedral at Natchez, erected by Catholics in 1841, a beautiful shrine of Gothic design, altars of Carrara marble and a 3,000-pound bell made by Giovanni Fontana and given to St. Mary's by James Alex. Fontana of Rome in 1879. The thinness of the bell's base, which later wedged into molten metal as the bell was cast.

More landmark to the past is the Protestant Church of Port Gibson, built in 1839 on what is now Church Street, a tree-shaded avenue containing probably the largest number of iron cast of work in the state.

The people of this magnificent structure is surrounded by an enormous wall of iron band with a prominent pointing heavenward. This bell in the church was a gift from the estate of the late Robert E. Lee, which in 1860 won the race with the Natchez in the most celebrated event of its kind in the history of Mississippi.

The century old Chapel of the Cross at Amundale, 10 miles north of Jackson, was built by the widow of a Scotch immigrant who numbered at Madison County in 1846.

When Johnstone, the beautiful daughter of the widow, met and fell in love with Henry Crow Vick, one of the founders of Vicksburg. After a long and happy courtship, the couple finally of the date for their wedding on March 18, 1859, the ceremony to be held in the Chapel of the Cross.

Four days before the wedding, some Vicksburg boys involved in an argument in the river's course, challenged to a duel. Despite a promise he had made to Helen never to kill a man, Henry was on the declining ground at the appointed hour.

In the new dawn Helen's lover stood off the count, turned and fired his shot into the air over his opponent's head, thereby keeping him out of the wedding which took place the next day.

Vick's body was returned to a sodden Amundale for burial in the graveyard of the Chapel. Legend has it that the bride of Amundale to this day visits the grave of her lover in the lonely churchyard at the Chapel of the Cross.

Many of these churches offered comfort to the leader of the day in trying times.

Such was the Church of the Redeemer at Piquette, a beautiful ivy-covered Episcopal building which place built in 1850. Here Jefferson Davis and his family attended services while living at Beauvoir, last home of the only Confederate general.

The growth of cities and the development of rapid modes of travel have resulted in many churches in the big East appearing in the Mississippi churches. But "breathes there the man with soul so dead" who could fail to feel in certain awe and reverence upon entering a church which has withstood the test of time, and war, and suffering.

A greater act of patriotism is to withhold the match that might destroy a resource!

...is economic growth

The movement into Mississippi of new business enterprises, financed by private capital, has been the key to the state's phenomenal economic growth over the past decade.

The oil industry is one of the most significant of these private enterprise groups whose activities and expenditures are contributing heavily to Mississippi progress. GULF, producer of more than one-fifth of the state's crude oil output, is proud to have had a part in the constructive work of Mississippi's oil industry.

The thousand of American investors who own GULF have spent, through the company's exploration, drilling, production and pipe line operations, $120 million in Mississippi. As these operations earn a return on the private capital invested, they add momentum to the expansion of Mississippi's economy.

Private capital creates jobs and payrolls, pays taxes...it improves the economic condition of every Mississippian. Investment of GULF capital is indeed a "good sign for Mississippi."

RECENT OIL LEASES BRING $5 MILLION INTO STATE AREA

JACKSON Miss. (Special) Central Mississippi landowners, attorneys, title examiners and chancery clerks have gained an estimated five million dollars since a deep oil reservoir was discovered in Hinds County during July, according to an oil industry spokesman.

E. D. Kenna, executive vice president of the Mississippi-Alabama Division, Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association, said that major oil companies, independent oilmen and an army of local amateurs have paid out at least this sum for lease bonuses to landowners and fees to attorneys, title examiners and chancery clerks.

The total Mississippi acreage under lease to oil operators has increased by about 1,000,000 acres since the Bolton field discovery. At a very conservative estimate, 12 million of the state's 30 million acres are now under lease and earning annual rentals for their owners, Kenna said.

Most of the recent lease buying has taken place in Hinds, Rankin, Warren, Copiah, Simpson, Scott, Yazoo, Madison and Claiborne Counties.

The spirited leasing activity which has poured new money into central Mississippi began as soon as drill-stem tests indicated oil could be produced in satisfactory quantities from sands in a formation of Lower Cretaceous age at an exploratory well near Bolton in sec. 19-6n-2w, Hinds County. The discovery well was Larcio Drilling Company's No. 1 Lettie McAlpin.

When final electric log showed approximately 100 feet of oil sand in various intervals below 8400 feet, and when production tests proved the Bolton field discovery to be potentially one of the biggest oilers ever completed in Mississippi, the lease and royalty buying was spurred to near-boom proportions.

For many years, geophysical surveys and wildcat drilling in central Mississippi which tested the horizons producing in other state areas failed to establish oil or gas production. Now that the deep-lying Lower Cretaceous formation has yielded oil, all previous work which did not evaluate this horizon is subject to reappraisal.

Almost all of central Mississippi from the Mississippi River to the Soso area of Jasper and Jones Counties is likely to see continued leasing. Together with geophysical exploration and some drilling.

Already this activity has proved a healthy stimulant to the state's general economy, placing new buying power in the hands of individuals in an area which still must rely largely upon agriculture for its income.

Blessed are the young because they shall inherit the national debt.

COL. BIRDSONG CITES LAW OFFICERS AIDING IN RECENT MANHUNT

JACKSON Miss. (Special) Col. T. B. Birdsong, Commissioner of Public Safety and leader of the recent manhunt for escaped killers Minor Sorber and Gerald Gallego, today gave much of the credit for the manhunt's successful completion to sheriffs, their deputies, city policemen, and other law enforcement officers from throughout the state who aided in the four-day search.

"Both myself and the men of the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol would like to thank each person individually who assisted in the strenuous hunt for Sorber and Gallego, however, this is impossible.

"In the first place, it would be impossible to recount the names of all the fine people and officers who assisted in this search, one of the biggest this state has ever known.

"However, I would like to acknowledge the splendid assistance given in this search by the University of Mississippi and Chancellor Williams (Sorber and Gallego were sighted from the Ole Miss helicopter piloted by young Jimmy Faulkner), Major Fred Thurman and the Mississippi Air National Guard; the State Forestry Service and the State Fire Marshal's Office; D. F. McCormick and the Natchez Trace Parkway; Rev. S. W. Valentine and Dr. W. Douglas Hudgins for their prayers; and Lt. Jimmy Griffin and the National Guard. Also, I would like to especially thank Charles Town City Marshal N. Z. Trout for the use of his bloodhounds and the Mississippi State Prison at Parchman and the Louisiana State Penitentiary at Angola, La., for the use of their dogs. (The Angola dogs, however, did not arrive in time to actually assist in the capture of Sorber and Gallego.)

"And these," the Colonel added, "are only a few."

It has been estimated that between 250 and 300 law enforcement officers, representing almost every area of the state, had helped Highway Patrolmen in the search for Sorber and Gallego, convicted murderers who bludgeoned and killed J. C. Landrum to death in their flight from the Hinds County jail Friday morning, Sept. 10.

"It could easily be said," Colonel Birdsong continued, "that an entire state was very much on the alert, captured these two killers."

Colonel Birdsong also praised the newspapers and radio and TV stations for their splendid cooperation throughout the manhunt. "It is indeed a compliment to Mississippi that these two callous killers did not escape," the leader of the manhunt emphasized.

A heartfelt thanks was also extended to the women of the communities, where road blocks were maintained during the chase. Highway Patrolmen, manning the blocks, were not allowed to go hungry or without hot coffee during the long hunt, thanks to the hospitable nearby residents.

One uniformed patrolman stated that he would always remember the Sorber-Gallego hunt for the "remarkable manner in which everyone pitched in and helped until the job was completed."

FIRST WOMAN AT OLE MISS 72 YEARS AGO THIS MONTH

Seventy-two years ago this month, in September, 1882, women were admitted for the first time to the University of Mississippi—the first state-supported school in Mississippi admitting women students.

The Board of Trustees voted to admit "females" on the same basis as men, except in the preparatory division.

The first student body to include women had only 11 out of a total enrollment of 259. The first University graduating class of women in it was that of 1885. Among the honor "men" the highest ranking was Miss Sallie Vick Hill, who became a member of the newly organized Industrial Institute and College for Women, and in the fall of 1885 was designated by the Board to teach elocution.

THIS WEEK Farm Bureau

Names of the 1954 resolutions committee for the Mississippi Farm Bureau, termed by State President Boswell Stevens of Macon as the most important functioning group within the policy development realm of that organization, were released today.

Such a committee is appointed annually by Mr. Stevens upon mandate of the governing board of directors. Members of the committee represent the multiple agricultural and sectional interests of the state.

The duties of this committee are to digest, screen and coordinate all resolutions submitted by the county Farm Bureaus in order to present representative resolutions to delegates at the annual Mississippi Farm Bureau Federation convention to be held in Jackson in November. Final Farm Bureau policies are formulated by delegates at the convention.

State Senator Hudson Kyle of Clarksville, prominent Coahoma county farmer and businessman, has accepted the appointment to serve as chairman of the committee for the second consecutive year. He will call a meeting of the committee for the middle of October.

Officials of the Farm Bureau on both county and state levels are well pleased with early results of a membership enrollment campaign. State President Boswell Stevens said:

"Farm Bureau workers in the counties are getting solidly behind the drive which started a month ago and one county has already reported over 200 members for 1955," he said.

A goal of 50,000 Mississippi farm families as members has been set for 1955 and Farm Bureau officials say that every farm family in Mississippi will be given the opportunity to join.

Stevens points out that this year the membership campaign takes on new importance for farm people, because of the many complex problems affecting the welfare of Mississippi farm families. As spokesmen for farm people in matters of legislation, as an educational and action group, and as a social organization, farm bureau stands on the threshold of new services for farm people.

Alert Telephone Man Saves Fireman Overcome By Smoke

Fireman Overcome By Smoke

MERIDIAN - A city fireman, fighting a lone battle against a raging grass fire in suburban Meridian early Saturday afternoon, was seen to stagger and fall and fall again, suggesting may owe his life in the flames.

life to the fact that his fall was seen by C. P. Maxwell, Installation Foreman for the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company. Southern Bell employees generally receive first aid and rescue training.

City Fireman I. M. Moore, is back on duty at the East End Fire Station today, following several days of hospitalization including a twelve-hour stretch in an oxygen tent. Meanwhile, Mr. Maxwell is being praised by Fire Department

The fire came to Mr. Maxwell's attention first because it menaced telephone property including the company's warehouse and garage. The danger was increased by a group of large oil tanks which seemed to lie across the path of the spreading flames. A hose truck, manned only by Moore was sent to the scene and Mr. Maxwell volunteered to help unload the hose and attach it. Then Moore

Maxwell went behind the fire truck away from the heat and smoke to observe the results. From there, he saw Moore stagger and fall apparently overcome by the intense heat and the thick smoke. He ran to the immediate shadow of a lumber stack where Maxwell applied first aid measures. Upon his instruction, an ambulance was called and removed Moore to the hospital.
